

Virginia Green Attractions Profile:

Broad Appétit Richmond, Virginia June 5, 2011

"Broad Appétit is a food festival that features only locally-owned restaurants and Virginia-based growers and food producers. Demonstrations, music, and kids' activities round out the perfect day in downtown Richmond.

Our event specifically features local producers and growers and specialty local food sources, as well as eco-friendly services such as Farm to Family, Backyard Farmers, Slow Food RVA and many other non-profits whose goal is to support our local, sustainable food sources and lessen our impact on the environment.

Our event is in its fourth year of operation and considers its eco-friendly stance one of its core purposes – to show how events can be gentle on the earth. As always, we seek to incorporate all levels of waste reduction such as recycling, composting, green printing practices and biodegradable banners, which we print minimal of."

Green Statement: "Broad Appétit has made being green a priority since its inception in 2008. We will always strive to do everything possible to eliminate waste and lessen our footprint."
