This report is drafted by the Virginia Department Environmental Quality (DEQ), with significant contributions from the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) and the Virginia Department of Health (VDH). The information presented here is the result of long-term, extensive collaboration among state environmental and public health staff, federal agencies, inter-state partnership programs, academic institutions, local municipalities, involved citizens, and the private sector. The level of effort required to produce this report cannot be overstated.

DEQ's Water Division has over 50 staff dedicated to the monitoring and assessment of the Commonwealth's waters. They work under the esteemed leadership of the agency's director David K. Paylor and division director Melanie D. Davenport. Monitoring and assessment staff are located in seven offices located across Virginia: Central Office (Richmond), Piedmont Regional Office (Glen Allen), Valley Regional Office (Harrisonburg), Northern Regional Office (Woodbridge), Tidewater Regional Office (Virginia Beach), Blue Ridge Regional Office (Roanoke and Lynchburg), and Southwest Regional Office (Abington).

Most of the sample analysis that renders this report possible is performed by the Virginia Department of Consolidated Laboratory Services.

DEQ appreciates the invaluable data provided by its community partners such as Virginia Save Our Streams, the Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay, and StreamWatch. Academic institutions such as Randolph Macon College, Virginia Commonwealth University, Virginia Institute of Marine Science, and Old Dominion University are also important components of DEQ's non-agency monitoring network.

Lastly, the United States Environmental Protection Agency provides guidance and oversight for this report and the activities required to produce it. Other federal agencies and inter-state programs that work in conjunction with DEQ include the United States Geological Survey, National Park Service, United States Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and the Federal-Interstate Chesapeake Bay Program.
